

Low Attaining Students: Grades 1-3

GCSE English Language:

Common Characteristics:
What do these students do? <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Come to school with lots of gaps.• Say that they 'Can't do it'.• Immediate barrier.• Lack of retention – not 'joining the dots'.• Expect 'spoon feeding'• STOP halfway – questions missed out.• Lack of attendance.• Lacking breadth of vocabulary.• Not developing explanations.• Not thinking about why.• Superficial comments – not analysis.• Not fluent readers.• Use questions as explanations – makes us wonder why.• Stock phrases.• Talk about characters, not as construct.• Explanation of language over effects.• Feature explanations.• Run out of time when planning and annotating.• Put effort into lower mark questions.• Instead of analysis/inference they paraphrase.• For comparison, they often cover one then the other, rather than pulling sources together.	What do they not do? <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Attend regularly.• Concentrate/listen for an extended period.• Organise their own learning structure.• Have an interest/desire to learn – make progress (sometimes).• Take risks with writing.• Speak English.• Develop a reading culture.• Reference the writer: what have they done?• Overall thesis statement and all points link back to it.• The 'why'.• Write enough for each question.• Explore what language creates.• Don't understand transferable skills from lit to language.• Manage time well – often by Q4 they have run out of steam/find the Qs hard/have not left enough time.• Analyse – especially in longer questions.

Suggested Strategies:

Reading

- Accelerated reader: interest appropriate texts.
- Retelling.
- Summarising.
- Develop fluency and engagement – software?
- Comprehension strategies.
- Over-drilling processes for each question (which we know is wrong, also know needs must).
- Sentence starters for each questions.
- P2Q4 – plan with stick men:
 - Scared, angry, frustrated
- WCF on annotation.
- Flipped learning:
 - Planning/annotation on class, writing for homework
 - Timed questions in class.
- Question in timed conditions to help them manage.
- aaa

Writing

- Scaffolding.
- Model responses structure strips.
- Word banks.
- Word derivations – dictionary activities (OUP website).
- Develop use of software tools.
- Plan in paragraphs.
- See themselves as ‘the writer’ and the examiner as ‘the reader’.
- Teach clear structures:
 - Drop, zoom, shift, return (P1Q5)
 - Cyclical structure (P2Q5)
- Planning:
 - Start with atmosphere to help with crafting
 - Drill planning activities
 - Reduce options to ensure focus (don’t do the narrative)
 - Box planning for focus descriptions.
- Plan – give grade 3 students simple structures for the writing which work for every question. For example: drop, shift, zoom in, zoom out.

GCSE English Literature:

Common Characteristics:
What do these students do? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Retell the story. • Describe. • Ignore the questions. • No cohesion – series of unrelated points. • Don't take quotes anywhere. • Learn quotes but do not use them to support the point. • Quotations that are apt for lots of themes/characters for Qs. • Repetitive – say the same thing in multiple ways. 	What do they not do? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Learn quotations. • Description. • Plot summary. • Lack of vocabulary. • Lack of analysis/depth of understanding. • Lack of knowledge of technical vocabulary. • Consider characters as constructs. • Explain what the writer has done and why. • Mini conclusions linking back to the questions. • Overarching purpose of Shakespeare - 19th century • Read/re-read the texts. • Plan answers – their ideas are very separate.

Suggested Strategies:

- Revision plan.
- Knowledge organisers.
- Writing stamina: more timed questions.
- Model answers at relevant grades – deconstruct together.
- What, how, why – no other acronyms that take up cognitive processes and encourage technique spotting.
- Re-read the texts as part of revision programme with audio version links.
- Links between texts to show shared themes.
- Front loading writer in paragraphs to ensure exploration of characters as constructs.
- Lots of timed planning practice:
 - Model this regularly
 - Lots for different questions to match quotations to themes
